

GIRL RE-ARRESTED FOR MURDER OF A YEAR AGO

Was Then Freed by Unwritten Law—Breaks up Home and Authorities Are Now Pushing the Murder Case.

New Orleans, Nov. 15.—Because she has broken up another woman's home, Katie Fetsch will now be tried for the murder of Frank Mischler nearly a year ago.

Katie shot Mischler within 48 hours after a jury had freed

Katie Fetsch and the charge was pigeon-holed. But Katie has since given the lie to her plea of innocence defiled, by taking Julius Sampson away from his wife and living with him.

This developed from the arrest of Sampson and Katie for disorderly conduct, and an action for alimony brought against Sampson by his wife.

Katie has been re-arrested and the murder charge will be pushed vigorously.

Claims Organized Labor Menace to the Country

St. Louis, Nov. 15.—Labor circles here are indignant at statements made by John Kirby, jr., of a Dyton, Ohio, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, that organized labor is a menace to the country, and that, on account of it, "we are living on the crest of a volcano."

Kirby made his statement at a dinner given yesterday by the St. Louis committee of the organization.

"I do not deny the right of labor to organize," said Mr. Kirby, "but I do not believe in an organization that has a headquarters whence dynamite and nitroglycerin are hissed over the country, endangering the lives of whole carloads of persons while in transit, as well as the destruction of great properties when it reaches its goal. This is the kind of organized labor I am fighting, and will fight to the end."

Katie Fetsch.

Mamie McLaughlin, who had killed her betrayer and who pleaded the unwritten law. Katie made the same plea and said Mischler was the father of her child, born soon after. The child died.

In the face of public sentiment aroused by the McLaughlin case it seemed impossible to convict
